NABCA Elects New Officers at Annual Meeting in Denver

Denver, CO – September 18, 2025- The National Association of Black Catholic Administrators (NABCA) has elected its new officers during its annual meeting in Denver. The election results saw the re-election of key leadership, as well as the introduction of new faces committed to advancing the Association's mission of providing leadership and a voice for Black Catholics nationwide.

Re-elected to serve as President is Fr. Reginald Norman of the Diocese of Bridgeport, Connecticut. Fr. Norman continues to be a dedicated advocate for Black Catholics, promoting inclusion, diversity, and faith within the broader Church community. Dale Brown, from the Diocese of St. Petersburg, was re-elected as Secretary, ensuring effective communication and organizational support for NABCA's programs.

Joining the leadership team are two newly elected officers: Rahsaan Garlin of the Archdiocese of Newark, who has been elected Treasurer, and Ashley Morris of the Archdiocese of Atlanta, who will serve as Vice President. Together, these leaders bring a wealth of experience and passion for empowering Black Catholic communities across the country.

Founded in 1976, NABCA's mission remains steadfast in its commitment to providing leadership, advocacy, and support to Black Catholics nationally. The organization works tirelessly to represent the unique needs and aspirations of Black Catholic administrators and to foster a vibrant faith community.
